

For Today, March 4

"God is directing this show and I don't want to miss my cue."

I sing in a large choir. It's vital to keep your eyes on the director so we know when to come in and when to cut off. We have to be familiar with the music, listen to the singers around us and watch the conductor. When we are in sync with each other, the music is touching and beautiful. When we are not "tuned in" the mistakes are noticeable and the music is not soothing.

When I pray I ask for the cues that will help me to live better. I find the "hum" of my spirit and become open to watching for my cues. I am able to Live and Let Live and let the others in my life have their growing experiences. Sometimes their pain is what they need to open to their teachable moments.

I believe God knows my name and he knows everyone else's. So for today I'll choose peace and be happy to experience my "hum" and I will be less likely to miss my cues.
